A training conference for all clinicians, Asian and non-Asian:

This year marks the 20th annual Asian American Mental Health Training Conference. The purpose of this year’s training is to reflect on significant mental health issues and address future needs facing Asian Americans. This training provides an opportunity for mental health professionals, students/trainees, consumers and their family members to converge on future directions to advance the treatment of mental health problems encountered today. As a result of this training, participants will better understand issues relevant to the Asian American community as well as become more confident in applying culturally appropriate treatment strategies. Particular emphasis will be placed on school violence, addiction, and family intergenerational conflicts.

No pre-requisite is required. Each participant requesting CME/CE credits is required to fill out a program evaluation form.
